Why is the process so inefficient?

In this example:

- Only 3 hospitals were really affected by the recall but 6,000 hospitals end up looking at the recall alert
- Supplier receives calls and product returns from organizations that are not affected

In reality:

- Tens of thousands of letter get sent
- All hospitals end up looking at the alerts
- It takes months to deal with all the questions and returns from organizations that are not affected
- It costs millions

Targeted Recall Communication

An electronic platform directly connecting Suppliers to Providers to notify and manage backorders, shortage & recall events

Immediate visibility to meaningful information

Transparency with all key stakeholders

Reduced time to resolution

A consolidated view to all recall activity

Minimize risk to patients caused by recalls and supply disruptions

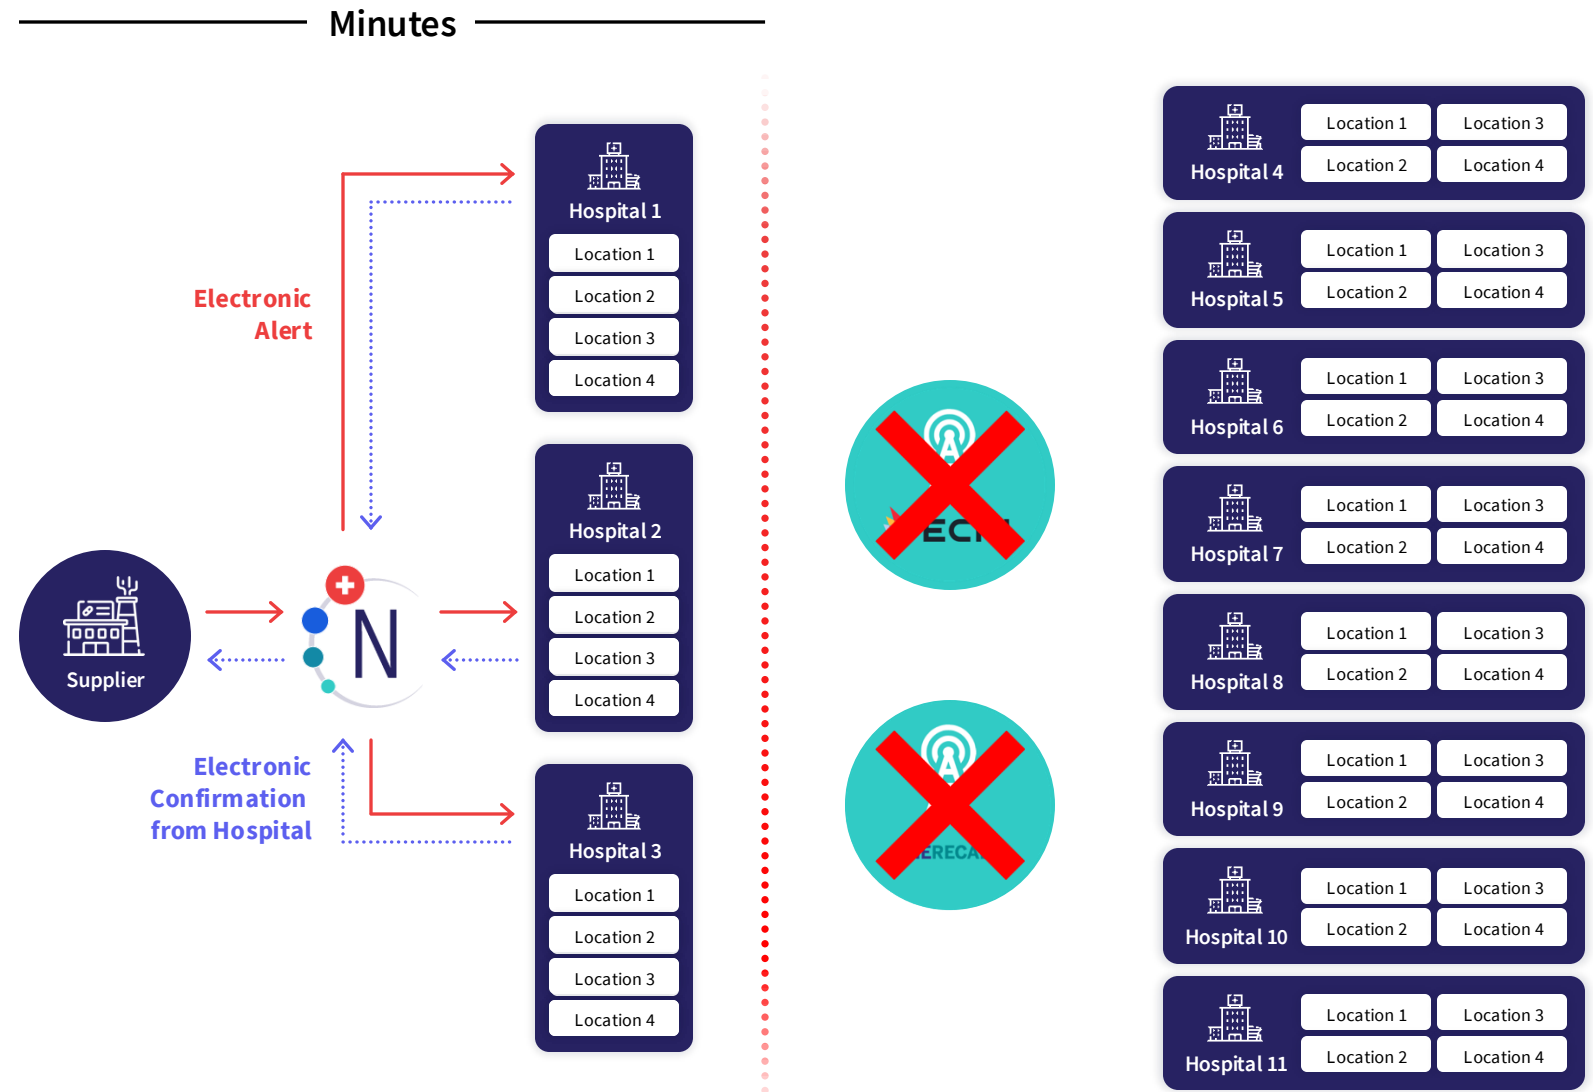

How NOTISPHERE solves the problem

With NotiSphere:

- Only 3 hospitals were really affected and only 3 hospitals receive the alert
- Supplier only communicates with those hospitals affected

In reality:

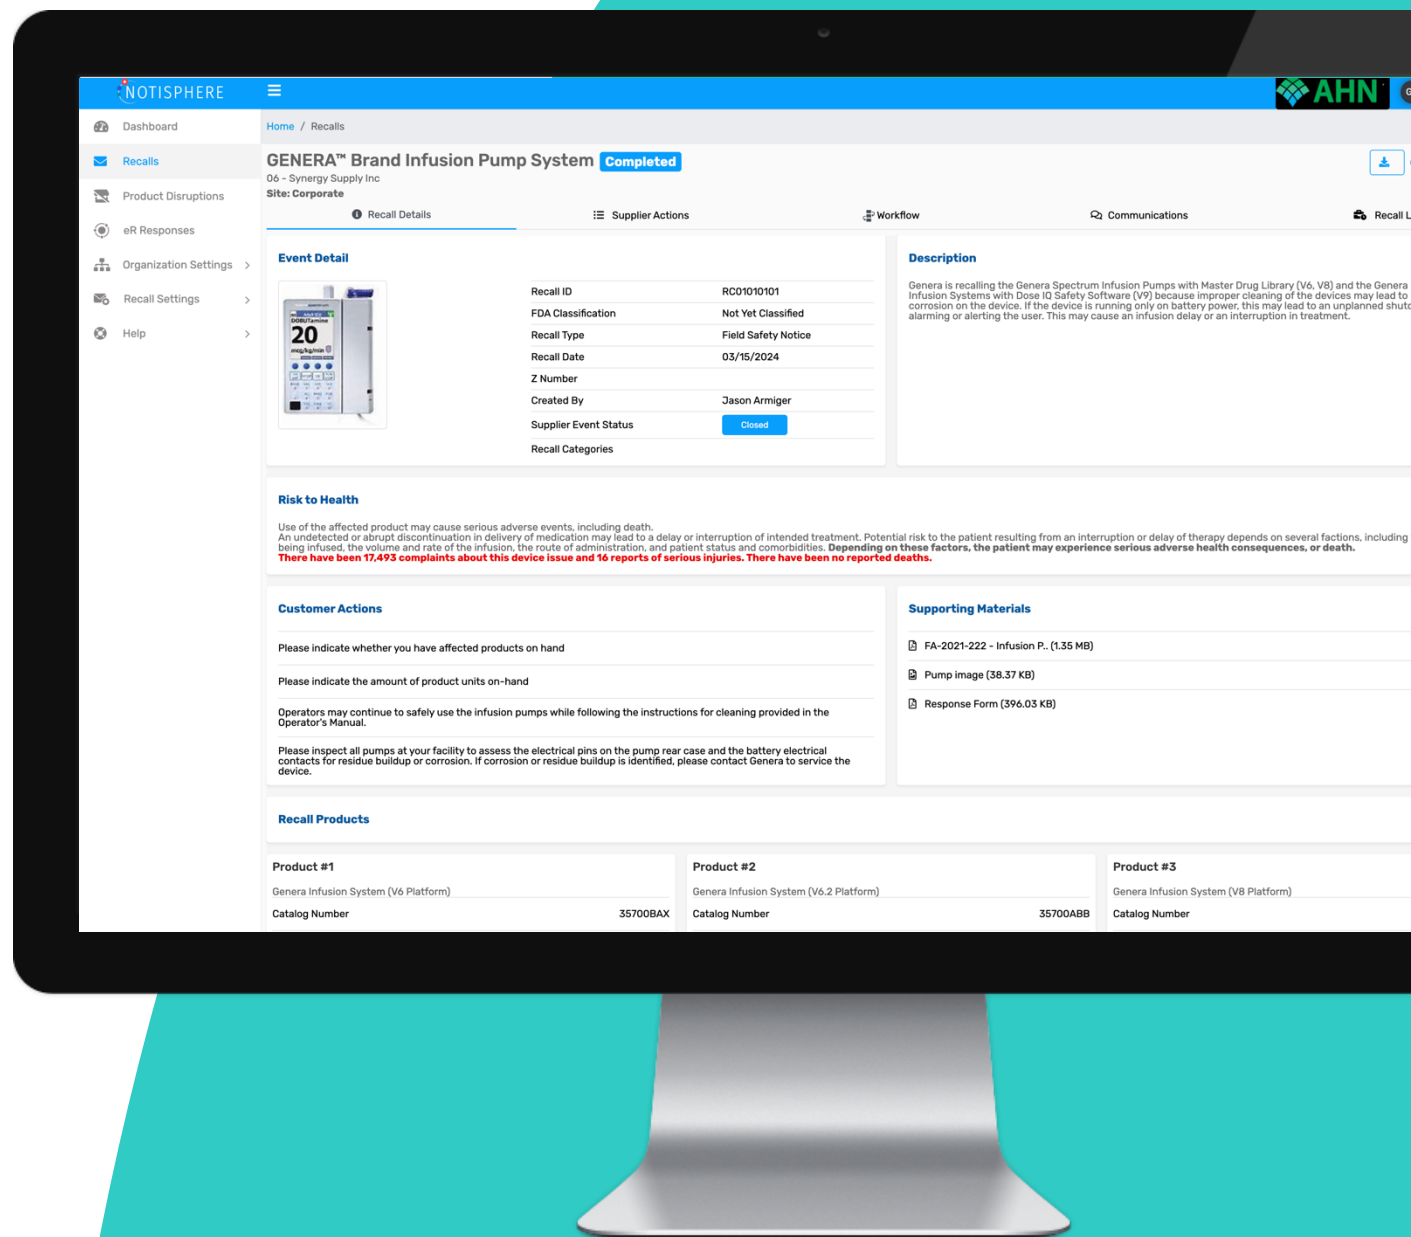

- A few hundred electronic communications replace tens of thousands of overnight letters
- Hospitals not affected don't waste time looking at an alert that doesn't pertain to them
- The number of questions to supplier is vastly reduced
- It costs a fraction of what the paper-based approach costs
- It saves weeks of time and reduces the number of affected patients

Direct Communication to the Provider Recall Coordinator for Suppliers

- Verified connection to recall coordinators at provider
- A single electronic notification required to notify affected hospitals
- Immediate acknowledgement of receipt by Providers
- Eliminate need for multiple notifications or follow up phone calls to provider

Only one notification required to achieve high response rate and compliance needs
